UTICA, N.Y. (WKTV) - The Easter Bunny won't be coming until Sunday, but the search for eggs began on Saturday as the Children's Museum held its annual Easter egg hunt.

Kids searched far and wide in the museum for eggs.

Executive director of the museum Marlene Brown says the hunt for eggs goes back to the country's founding, when settlers depended on hunting and gathering.

Brown said, "Family camaraderie, and being able to socially interact with other kids. Those are important self confidence building skills for kids, so the kids will kind of buddy up with one another after a while, and the parents will start chatting with one another, it's a nice collegial friendly environment."
